CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

This chapter discusses background of the study, statement of problem, purpose of the study, significance of the study, scope and limitation, and definition of key terms.

1.1 Research Background

Harmer (2008) stated that children were faster in learning than adolescence. Besides, teaching English at the primary schools was mainly aims to build the learners’ interest in learning a foreign language (Rachmajanti, 2008). It is also supported by Sukarno (2008:58) at this level, they are in the golden age so that they can learn anything easily. From the statements above, it can be assumed that Teaching English at elementary level is easier than junior or senior high school level.

Vocabulary learning is an important part of any language learning process. Vocabulary also is an important element needed by the learners in studying the foreign language in order to communicate with the target language. According to Linda (2017), Vocabulary is an important part of learning a foreign language. It will be impossible for young learners to learn English without learning vocabulary because vocabulary is one of the major components used in verbal or non-verbal communication. Besides, Ahmadi et al (2012:186) stated that vocabulary learning is one of the most important factors that foreign language learners encounter during the process of learning a foreign language. In other words, it is better to teach English vocabulary from the early ages. From the statements above, it can be concluded that learning vocabularies is the basic need of students at elementary schools in order to get success in learning English.

On the other hand, teaching English vocabulary to young learner sometimes arises crucial problems. It is because, first, young learners have their own characteristics so that the teachers could not only focus on their lesson plans, they should be more flexible. Second, young learners can hold their attention for about 15 to 20 minutes in learning. It is not as much as adult learners do (Mustafa, 2010:122).

The teacher should pay attention to the general problems that are often faced in the teaching and learning activities. Besides, the teacher should also know that young learners can learn easier than adults when they learn by doing. The teacher should give direct experience and physical activities such as playing game or direct experience (Linda, 2017). In fact, it is important for the teacher to know how to teach English vocabulary to young learners by using appropriate techniques in order to get success in teaching and learning activity.

There are some studies about teaching English vocabulary to young learners. such us the research conducted by Indah (2008), Her study was about the techniques of teaching English vocabulary at SDN Parangargo 02 Wagir, Malang. The result of her study showed the English teacher applied visuals techniques, mime and gesture techniques, contrasts and opposites technique as her techniques in teaching English vocabulary because most of the students gave positive response and it made students understand the materials quickly.

Besides, Heni (2013), conducted a study about techniques of teaching English vocabulary used by a teacher at SD Arrohmah Malang. The result showed that the teacher applied seven techniques in teaching and learning English vocabulary. They are; visual technique, translation technique, sing a song technique, dialog technique, games technique, realia technique, mime and action techniques. Another research that was conducted by Ambarwati (2007), found that the teacher applied lecturing, discussing, direct experience, audio visual, and game techniques in teaching English vocabulary. Furthermore, Hardiyanti (2013) found that the teacher applied visual technique, mime, gesture, contrast and also opposite technique, example of the type, translation, game, and also song.
