Teenager ages are the transition period from child ages to maturity ages. In adaptation process to get the maturity, commonly teenagers had confused to find their self-concept. Therefore, teenagers had not found their self-identity. Self-concept is the important part in teenager life, because self-concept would determine how someone acts in his or her ages. This concept is not particularly factor of human characters, but a factor that we had to learn and formed by individual experiences related with others.

First man whom they met is their family and whole members. Therefore, family is the first place to built self-concept of children. Many family aspects such as unattended parent, both of they passed away or divorced, thus declared that parent is a model and resource of firming children idea and sense about what would they become and their achievement in the future.

The aim of this study is to know teenager self-concepts on case divorced parent. Writer use qualitative method, observation data, interviewing, and documentation on this study. Subject of this study is students of SMU Widya Gama Malang whose parent gets divorced.

Based on this study, writer described that teenager self-concept whose parent gets divorced in SMU Widya Gama Malang had negative inclined. It has shown from its subjective self-concept, which has highly egoism such as obstinate, rebelling, selfish, and offended. Whereas they have underestimate of their self-aspects. They have considered that they could not make something worth, it has affected their interpersonal relationship, and other mentally functions. In interpersonal relationship; social self-aspect, they have intercourse difficulties in their age. Teenagers who have intercourse difficulties, they would not accept in their community. Apart from that, biological differences between man and woman in self-concept measurement have determining part of their own gender. Source of man self-concept formed, prominently in showing their manliness. However, woman emphasized in their feminists, such as gentleness and physically attraction.

Abstract

Teenager ages are the transition period from child ages to maturity ages. In adaptation process to get the maturity, commonly confused teenagers had to find their self-concept. Therefore, teenagers had their self-identity not found. Self-concept is the important part in teenager life, because self-concept would determine how someone acts in his or her ages. This concept is not particularly factor of human characters, but a factor that we had to learn and formed by an individual related experiences with others. They first met the man whom is their whole family and members. Therefore, family is the first place to build self-concept of children. Many family such aspects as unattended parent, both of theirs passed away or divorced, thus declared that the parent is a model and resource of firming children idea and sense about what would they changed from and their achievement in the futures.

The aim of this study is to know teenager self-concepts on case divorced parent. Writer use qualitative methods, data observation, interviewing, and documentation on this study. Subject of this study is students of SMU Widya Gama Malang whose parent gets divorced. Based on this study, the writer described that teenager whose self-concept divorced parent gets SMU Widya Gama Malang inclined had negative. It has shown from its subjective self-concept, the which has highly egoism such as obstinate, rebelling, selfish, and offended. Whereas they have underestimate of their self-aspects. They have considered that they could not make something worthwhile, it has affected their interpersonal relationships, and other mentally functions. In interpersonal relationships, social self-aspect, they have intercourse difficulties in their age. Teenagers who have intercourse difficulties, they would not accept in their community. Apart from that, biological differences between man and woman in self-concept measurement have determining part of their own gender. Source of self-concept formed man, prominently in showing their manliness. However, woman emphasized in their feminists, such as gentleness and physically attraction..